

Hydroxyapatite ridge augmentation with and without using stent

This study was carried out on 10 patients to evaluate augmentation of severely atrophic mandibular alveolar ridge with and without using stent. Augmentation of alveolar ridge was directed towards achieving a foundation for a prosthesis that will be stable and retentive under functional stresses. The results of the study were assessed and discussed.